Completion of IO2 eLearning programme validation

We are delighted to share very good news about the DigiGuide eLearning platform!

The platform offers free online professional development resources for Information, Advice and Guidance practitioners working in a variety of context including youth and adult education, employment and careers guidance. This eLearning programme features digital resources covering four main competence areas: Information and Data Literacy, Communication and Collaboration, Digital Content Creation and Safety.

Members of the DigiGuide CoP worked together in the co-production of the platform which was peer reviewed and validated by more than 60 IAG practitioners from our 6 partner countries. Get to know more about the platform and the eLearning programme on our website or at the coming events. These resources will be available soon for any practitioners to take the course individually and for facilitators to guide groups of learners through the resources.

The eLearning programme was built around the EU Digital Competences framework. Find out more about the framework here or use this tool to self-assess your digital competences and those of your organisation.

IO3 Self-learning Guide on Digital Transformation for IAG Service Managers

In recent months, DigiGuide's partners have been working on the development of a guide for IAG guidance service managers to accompany them through the digital transition. In developing this guide each partner involved a group of managers from the sector to identify the main issues and needs of guidance professionals facing the challenges of digitalisation. See updated version of the Guide here !

The guide, realised in the format of an interactive presentation produced with Genially, consists of a general part and a section with insights on the local contexts of the project partner countries. The managers were again involved in the validation process of the guide, during which they were able to give us further guidance on how to improve it and adapt it to the needs of those working in the IAG service sector.
